At the appointed time I walked into the drawing-room in Harley street: the very few relatives of the old gentleman were assembled. There was Constance, looking as Hebe might have looked if ever Hebe had worn crape and bombazine; Constance's mother looking very stiff, cross and uneasy; an elderly female cousin, and a stripling nephew of the deceased. I feared none of them. I knew that Mr. Graham disliked his fine lady sister-in-law, despised the servility of his elderly cousin, and dreaded the frolics of his stripling nephew. I seated myself by Constance. and in a soft tone began to protest my affection and disinterestedness. 'Knowing the caprice of your uncle, my beloved,' I said, 'I have every reason to conclude that I shall hear that you are disinherited; this, however, will be of but little moment to me, I have enough song beautifully says :

Still fixed in my heart be it never forgot That the wealth of the cottage is love.' "I fancy, Mr. Chilton,' said Constance's mother, looking excessively sneering and shrewish, 'that it is pretty well known that my daughter is the heiress of her uncle's wealth.

*Indeed, madam ?' I replied, with a start of BAGS Rio COFFEE, urprise, 'I was not aware that surprise, 'I was not aware that any surmise was hazarded concerning the contents of Mr.

Graham's will.' 'I have heard a surmise hazarded,' sharply interrupted the elderly cousin, 'that Mr. Graham was not in his senses when he made it.' "The mind must be both base and weak."

retorted Constance's mother, 'which could give credence to such a rumor.' And forthwith a sparring dialogue took place between the two ladies, during which I whispered to Constance a page of Moore's poetry done into Temple now entered the room, the solicitor and intimate friend of the late Mr. Graham; he was a handsome young man, and had presumed at one time to lift his eyes to Constance; he opened the will, and we all became mutely attentive. Oh, what a disappointment awaited us! Three thousand pounds were bequeathed to Constance, (this was the old fellow's idea of a handsome provision!) Five hundred pounds to the elderly consin, ditto to the stripling nephew, small legacies to the servants, and the remainder of his wealth to found a cold water establishment for the reception of those who were not rich enough to ple read the names of the attesting witnesses, and then refreshed himself with sherry and biscuits. As he was a friend of the family, his presence was no restraint on conversation. 'That will ought to be disputed,' said Constance's mother, looking very red, 'I do not believe Mr. Graham was in his senses when " . I thought,' said the elderly cousin, with a sneer, 'that the mind must be both base and weak which could give credence to such a sur-

Dear mamma!' said Constance, 'do not be discomposed; I am very well contented-I shall not be quite a portionless bride.' Constance here held out her delicate white hand to me-I affected not to see it. " My dear Miss Graham,' I said, 'do not believe me so cruel and selfish as to wish to plunge you into poverty.' · I thought you said that your income was sufficient for every comfort,' remarked the stripling nephew. I did not condescend to answer him, but continued: 'No, Constance, though it breaks my heart to do so, I give you back your freedoin, saying, in the pathetic words of Havnes Bayley, . May your lot in life be happy, undisturbed by thoughts of me!' I was just making to the door, leaving Constance looking more like Niobe than Hebe, when Temple said, 'I think the party had better remain till I have read the codicil.' I reseated myself in amaze, and Temple forthwith read that the testator, being convinced that he had received no benefit from the cold water system, revoked and rescinded his legacy to it, bequeathing the same to his beloved niece, Constance Graham. * Constance! dear Constance!' I exclaimed, in the softest tones. But Constance looked neither like Hebe nor Niobe, but as stern and severe as Medea. I then attacked Temple. Is it legal,' I said, 'only to read part of a 'I read every word of the will,' he replied, and, having greatly fatigued myself by so doing, I trust that it was perfectly legal to refresh myself with a glass of sherry before I read the eodicil.'

*I was going to utter some further remarks, when Constance's mother said 'Good morning, Mr. Chilton!' in a tone of voice which left me no alternative but to echo her leavetaking, and I descended the stairs, pursued by hundred acres. She was finally induced, by seeing your advertisement, to give your Sarsaparilla a trial. We procured some of it from your agent (Mr. Van Buskirk) and t gives me pleasure to state that after using it she expeenced great relief, and was in a very short time perfectly cured. I was also (together with a man in my employ) badly troubled with piles, and by using a small quantity of your Sarsaparilla, our complaint was completely cured. I consider it one of the best of medicines, and would advise all who are afflicted to give it a trial. GARRIT GARRABRANT.
